

Call for Research Papers

We, the editorial board of the Asia-Japan Research Institute of Ritsumeikan University are currently accepting papers for Volume 4, 2023.

You can submit your papers to the Bulletin at any time, and they will be published online once they pass the review. Research articles, review articles, and research notes will be peer-reviewed by a double-blind review system and this will be clearly indicated when they are published.

We invite the submission of original research contributions in all disciplinary and multi-disciplinary fields relating to Asia and/or Japan, and we welcome papers from a broad range of fields such as humanities, economics, law, international relations, policy science, engineering, pharmaceutical sciences, life sciences, sport and health sciences, and multi-disciplinary fields.

The institute not only welcomes all valuable and innovative papers on historical, contemporary, and innovative issues of Asia and/or Japan but also encourages interdisciplinary research through the development and fusion of various fields such as the natural sciences, social sciences, and humanities.

Please send your papers any time, by an MS Word file attached to an email together with the submission application form. For the formatting of papers, please conform to the AJI Style Sheet. The Submission Guidelines and relevant documents can be found in the links below.
