

Emergency Seminar: "Drifting Korean Politics: The Future of the <Impeachment> Political Situation"

On December 23, 2024 (Monday), Ritsumeikan University Center of East Asia Peace and Cooperation, in collaboration with Ritsumeikan University Center for Korean Studies, held an emergency seminar titled "Drifting Korean Politics: The Future of the <Impeachment> Political Situation."

The seminar invited Professor Kan Kimura, a distinguished scholar specializing in Korean politics, to discuss the ongoing political turmoil in South Korea, which began with the declaration of martial law on the night of December 3. The discussion focused on interpreting the current state of Korean politics and exploring the necessary responses from Japan.

Despite being an urgent event, the seminar attracted significant attention, with approximately 150 participants joining online and over 20 attending in person. The active Q&A session highlighted the interest in the topic. This seminar provided a valuable opportunity to reflect on and learn from the neighboring country's situation, offering insights into what Japan should consider moving forward.

Ritsumeikan University's East Asia Peace and Cooperation Research Center actively engages in academic exchanges with various research organizations, transcending linguistic and disciplinary boundaries.
